1. Firm plans over N1b CSR investment

As part of its Corporate Social Responsibility efforts, MTN Foundation has said that it would be investing about a N1billion to upgrade not fewer than 40 Primary Healthcare Centres (PHCs) across the country under its ‘What We Can Do Together Initiative’. According to the Executive Secretary, MTN Foundation, Mrs Odunayo Sanya, MTN Foundation does not assume that it knows what a community wants as many corporate bodies that have assumed they knew what a community needed at a point in time had built projects that ended up with little or no impact on the people.

At the unveiling of the project, in Lagos, Sanya said there are 30,000 PHCs in Nigeria, adding that less than 25 per cent of them are functioning. From inception to date, Sanya said that MTN Foundation has invested about N25 billion in different projects, adding that, for the fifth phase of the project, the Foundation will be investing over N1 billion to ensure that Nigerians at the community level, have access to quality healthcare services. She called on more corporate organisations to come into the space.

2. Squamish Chamber calls for corporate responsibility from FortisBC

The Squamish Chamber of Commerce released a letter acknowledging the potential economic growth of the Eagle Mountain - Woodfibre Gas Pipeline Project but also calling for “corporate responsibility” from FortisBC to address the risks. Christopher Fehr, the executive director of the chamber, penned a letter outlining some of the positives and challenges associated with the project. Among the positives included employment opportunities as well as “stimulating local businesses and contributing to regional energy security. “However, Fehr also wrote there were risks of putting pressure on the housing supply, local workforce and municipal infrastructure.

“This is an opportunity for FortisBC to set an example of what corporate social responsibility is. While the project timeline is five years, the positive impacts to the community can last a lifetime.”

Fulton Bank's Corporate Social Responsibility Report discusses environment, volunteerism. Fulton Bank employees spent more than 13,500 hours volunteering in their communities in 2022, and the bank made more than $6.6 million in charitable contributions, according to Fulton's Corporate Social Responsibility Report. It also helped manage manure, proving that "Going green" is not just about LED lights and recycling. The report for 2022 reflects on how the Lancaster-based bank pursues social goals and makes money. Fulton Financial, parent company of the bank, had record operating earnings of $1.76 per share in 2022.

"It is because of that solid performance that we were able to advance our environmental, social and governance (ESG) efforts," Curtis J. Meyers, chairman, chief executive and president of Fulton, said in the report.

The bank's environmental commitment includes recycling electronic waste and paper, and in 2022, it set up a group to review Fulton's climate impact. Fulton also sells ESG investment products for customers who want to invest in a "green" way. The environmental goals extend to working with farmers, an important customer base. That commitment extends beyond the boardroom, all the way to the barnyard. To the management not of money, but of manure. Fulton Bank provided funding for a "methane digester" at AR Joy Farm in Chester County. The digester diverts food waste from landfills and reduces manure odor and runoff. That project generates carbon credits and renewable energy credits that can be sold, Fulton says. On the social front, 24% of Fulton's staff consists of people of color, according to the bank.

"Our commitment to promoting diversity, equity and inclusion is at the heart of Fulton's values," according to the 35-page 2022 report.

WHAT ROLE DO YOU SEE BRICS PLAYING IN SHAPING GLOBAL SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AGENDAS AND INFLUENCING INTERNATIONAL POLICIES IN THE FUTURE?

As BRICS consists of some of the fastest growing & developing economies, its policies and decisions can & will create a long lasting impact on citizens of its member countries. In today's world, every policy decision made by BRICS will play a vital role in directly or indirectly altering the economic, political and social development goals or agendas of their respective countries.

WHAT ARE YOUR FUTURE PLANS AND ASPIRATIONS FOR WOCKHARDT FOUNDATION? ARE THERE ANY NEW PROJECTS OR AREAS OF FOCUS THAT YOU PLAN TO EXPLORE?

The mission of Wockhardt Foundation is 'To work towards and fight for the upliftment of the poor, weak and needy' and as such all future plans & programmes will continue to revolve around this mission. All our initiatives are undertaken to provide maximum benefit to the underprivileged.

WOCKHARDT FOUNDATION HAS BEEN INVOLVED IN VARIOUS INITIATIVES ACROSS HEALTHCARE, EDUCATION, AND OTHER SOCIAL SECTORS. WHICH PARTICULAR PROJECT OR ACCOMPLISHMENT ARE YOU MOST PROUD OF AND WHY?

The project that I am most proud of is Wockhardt Foundation's flagship healthcare initiative, Mobile 1000 which provides doorstep delivery of free primary healthcare to people living in the remotest and rural parts of India. Each Mobile 1000 van has a doctor, driver and pharmacist and is equipped with medicines, diagnostics and consumables. It covers the ADCR formula of Awareness, Diagnosis, Cure and Referral.
